Subject: Water Contamination concerns

Dear Ms Sutton,

We are Canadians spending a lot of our winters in Naples Fl.

We have previously enjoyed much that Florida has to offer. The sun, the walks on the beach, the fresh air, and local seafood.

During the past two seasons the red tide has been an growing issue.

It severely affects the water, the air and produces dead fish on the beaches. It is not what it was when we came down here in 2010.

We have (for us) a substantial investment in our condo, and spend a considerable amount of money in Naples. during our stay here.

We are now considering selling our condo and leaving because we cannot see Florida taking any actions on this increasingly alarming situation.

The nicest surprise when we first came down here was the quality of the water. Just watching the dolphins, egrits, and sandpipers and being in "the real Florida" has been the reason we have purchased a home here. Last year we saw hundreds of dead fish, and had trouble breathing on the beach. We even saw a dead dolphin, so very sad.

Please, please restrict the fertilizers on the farming community or there will be no beautiful Florida left.

We hear comments of many visitors and homeowners in this part of Florida who are considering leaving and vacationing elsewhere in the future, which needless to say will have serious economic consequences.

This needs immediate attention, not a delay, before it is too late.

Respectfully Yours,
Elisabeth Wills Dios/Lars Dioes
